Remembering

Seth Dunn

By Melanie Zuercher with edits by Camille Claassen

Bethel College's Krehbiel Auditorium is the venue for convocation, instrumental concerts of all kinds, opera, lectures and theater - seldom a service of eulogy. However, it became "sacred space" Friday evening, August 5, 2011, as Bethel students, staff and faculty gathered to mourn and celebrate the life of Seth Dunn, who would have been a senior and who died in a skateboarding accident Monday, August 1, 2011.

Among those remembering Dunn was Megan Upton-Tyner, Bethel instructor of theater, who directed Dunn in Bethel's production of Wit in May 2011 as well as in the improv troupe. "It's appropriate that we're gathered in this sacred space," where Dunn spent so much time, she said - if he wasn't rehearsing a play or building sets, he was in the Krehbiel Auditorium audiovisual booth as a student employee of the AV department. He regularly worked convocations. "I can't make sense of the fact that he's gone," she said. "I won't even try. I can only try to make sense of his effect on my life. He was a person of humor, dedication and a fierce hold on life."

Dunn was majoring in communication arts. During the 2010-11 school year, in addition to his role in Wit, he played Albert Einstein in Steve Martin's comedy Picasso at the Lapin Agile, directed by 2011 graduate Clint Harris.

At the time of Dunn's death, Upton-Tyner e-mailed Margaret Edson, author of Wit, who came to campus spring 2011 to see the Bethel production and met the cast at that time. On learning of Dunn's death, Edson wrote: "I suppose we are all breath-based events. Here we come; there we go. What doesn't crumble? Our love. Where do we keep it? Safe inside. How long does it last? Forever."

Jackie Kamphaus goes to Nationals

By Melanie Zuercher with edits by Nicole Eitzen

At the Kansas Collegiate Athletic Conference Women's Cross-Country Championships Saturday, November 5, 2011, in McPherson, senior Jackie Kamphaus finished the 5K course in 20:11, in eighth place overall.

To be an individual qualifier for the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics championship meet, she had to be a top five finisher who was not on the winning team.

Kamphaus was Bethel's first cross-country national qualifier since 2008, when Annette Gingerich, a 2011 graduate, finished 186th at the national meet.

Kamphaus received a Champions of Character Award winner for 2010-11, which is given for leadership and service to others. She is a four-year letter winner for Bethel cross-country. This was her first national qualification.

"It is really exciting to see someone like Jackie be rewarded for all her hard work this year," said Coach Kent Allshouse, who is also Bethel College athletic director. "She has trained exceptionally hard and overcome some setbacks, but ultimately, she was peaking at just the right time, running personal best times in two of her last three meets.

"I knew she was going to qualify weeks ago," he added. "Jackie is such a giving person and she makes the old saying 'Good things happen to good people' ring true."

Putting together the pieces 1. Ryan Goertzen speaks to the audience while Mycah Westhoff listens in the background. 2. Audra Miller (standing in the back) speaks while Dalton Smith and Creigh Bartel wait to join in on this particular scene. 3. Taylor McCabe-Juhnke speaks while Sarah Pohl, Audra Miller and Creigh Bartel stand in the background.

"I like the way in which the play speaks for itself, without the sets and the movement. It really does rely on actual words, and it takes away from the idea of going to see a production. It breaks down what we would call the image of the fourth wall."

- Director Caitlin Buerge

Using actions and words 4. Jacob Brubaker tells a story while Ryan Goertzen, Taylor McCabe-Juhnke and Dalton Smith look on. Creigh Bartel portrays one of the men who was convicted of the murder. The unique part of this particular role and play is the fact that this character is included. He was unwilling to be interviewed for the first play. Sarah Pohl leans forward to tell a story from the point of view of a person in the playwriting company.

Opening act The Laramie Project cast lined up at the front of the stage to introduce the play and some of the characters in the productions. Each actor in the production played multiple characters.

The Laramie Project: Ten Years Later

Almost ten years after the initial showing of The Laramie Project, the Bethel College Drama department put on the show The Laramie Project: Ten Years Later. This particular show was a documentary production created entirely of interviews from the people involved in this particular event. It relied heavily on the cast's ability since each scene was an intimate setting between the audience and the actor. The play captivated the rebuilding of a town after a devastating murder. Also, on the Bethel campus, it led to much discussion about the issues of hate-crimes, beliefs, and sexuality.

Professor Bill Eash accompanied fifteen students on a trip to South Africa and Lesotho. The group spent almost a week in the village of Tlokoeng in Botha-Bothe. There, they lived, ate, and worked in the village with no running water. They continued to travel around, spending time working with crops, visiting the Maletsunyane Falls, relaxing in hot springs, enjoying the ocean, and touring the current MCC location in Pietermaritzburg.

This year, Bethel chose an opera, The Tender Land, for their spring production. This opera focused on a farm family in the Midwest, with older daughter Laurie ready to graduate from high school. Allison Yoder, who played the lead role of Laurie, enjoyed working with the guest director, Brian Luedloff. "You can tell he cares about everybody. [It's been good] working with a new director who has a completely different take not only on acting, but the music too. I can tell all the work he's put into it."

The 2011-2012 year was the inaugural season for the Bethel College Softball Team. The team was added to Bethel Athletics in 2010 but due to recruitment was unable to begin until the 2011-2012 season. Although the team was new, they started off with a bang, winning their very first game. The team also played a fall season, which was referred to by team members as the warm-up season.
